AFTERNOON DISPATCHES.

NORTH CAROLINA.

SALISBURY, N. C., May 25.
Judge Kelley spoke yesterday, and in the course of his remarks said he had been asked whether the Sherman bill was a final measure. To this he would answer that the South itself had decided that. As to the constitution of which he said he was to be afraid, he protested, that, no matter for all Mr. Stevens said in his speech, there was not a Republican in Congress that would not be satisfied with the Constitutional amendment was, he would not say that arrested franchise might not follow, or that Congress might not go further, than the taking from the men of large property who oppose the measures, a portion of their wealth. In this speech he asked them to believe this is the language he would have spoken in Mobile that the people listened to him, and assured them that all they read in the papers was but mere expounding of the language of the military dictator. But if the military bill was not a final measure, the Constitutional amendment was, he would not say that arrested franchise might not follow, or that Congress might not go further, than the taking from the men of large property who oppose the measures, a portion of their wealth.
